Itinerary

1

Weigh-in, harness and safety brief

Victoria Falls Zimbabwe

You are weighed and your weight is marked on your hand, which is how the crew select the right cord. The jump master walks you through the harness, the ankle rig and the two independent attachment points, then explains the one thing that matters: you walk to the edge and you go on their count.

2

The walk to the platform

Victoria Falls Zimbabwe

The jump platform sits at the centre of the Victoria Falls Bridge, on the border itself, with Zimbabwe behind you and Zambia ahead. The gorge drops away on both sides and the Zambezi runs 111 metres below. Most people find the walk out harder than the jump.

3

The jump

Victoria Falls Zimbabwe

A head-first dive, roughly four seconds of freefall, then the cord takes the load and you rebound back up the gorge. The rebounds get smaller until you are hanging quietly over the river, which is the part nobody expects to enjoy and almost everybody does.

4

Recovery and footage

Victoria Falls Zimbabwe

A crew member is lowered to clip you on and you are winched back up to the bridge deck. Photographs and video are filmed from fixed positions on the bridge and from the jump itself, and are available to buy afterwards. Allow time to steady your legs.
